

— We need your old computers! —

We need your old computers that you aren't using anymore. Donate them to a great cause. Kubmo partners with women's education programs around the world to teach and build digital literacy skills. By doing so, we hope to empower women to start their own businesses, pursue technical careers, and build a network of leaders around the world. Hard skills can unlock the power of independence.

This year we are headed back to Cusco, Peru to partner with The Visionaria Network, a non-profit working with young women in the region. We will be running technology workshops and teaching women about social media, HTML, CSS, and professional development. We are hoping to provide each participant with a used laptop that they can use during the workshop and keep afterwards to continue learning skills and growing their network.
